There is an epidemic of typhoid fever in Paris Ky. An investigation shows that many of the patients drank from the same spring of water and the spread of disease is attributed to that source.

Republican Speaking.

Judge Edward C. O'Rear, Republican candidate for Governor, will speak at the court house at 1 o'clock p. m. Friday October 20th. Judge O'Rear is an eloquent speaker and will doubtless draw a good crowd.

Mrs. Wherritt Has Accident

Mrs. Thos. Wherritt was the victim of an accident last Saturday which came near rendering her a cripple; she tripped over the leg of her sewing machine and fell cutting a gash in her forehead and requiring the services of a physician who took several stitches in the wound.

Stock Man Here.

Mr. R. H. Price of Townville S. C. is making Lancaster his headquarters for a short time and is endeavoring to buy a car load of horses and mules for shipment to his home town. While Mr. Price makes a specialty of mules, he will buy anything with four feet from a billy goat to an elephant.

An Old Timer.

In the Junction City letter to the Danville Messenger we think we can detect the ear marks of an "old timer". If we mistake not the reference to Jesse Sweeney as being as large as Alexander is the work of W. T. Burdett. "Peaches" is a good newspaper man and was dabbling in that kind of work when we were in swaddling clothes.

A Good Man For A Good Position.

Mr. Louis C. Hopper of this place has accepted the position of bookkeeper for the Danville Tobacco Warehouse Co. We congratulate the tobacco people on securing the services of Mr. Hopper. He is thoroughly efficient, courteous and polite and we are satisfied that he will be a valuable addition to their office force.

Lot Sale At Paint Lick.

There is to be a sale of town lots at Paint Lick Saturday. The sale is to be conducted under the auspices of home people, and this insures a square deal. Paint Lick is a thriving town and this is a splendid opportunity for her people to secure a nice site for a residence at their own price.

Go To Paint Lick.

Messrs W. O. Rigney, Henley Bastin J. W. Sweeney, Parker Gregory, A. T. Anderson and George Smith Jr. went up to Paint Lick in Bris Conn's big auto last Saturday night to assist the Masonic lodge of that place in conferring the Master's degree on several candidates.

McWilliams Dies.

Jas. McWilliams who was shot near Mt. Hebron, an account of which appeared in last week's issue of the Record, died last Thursday and his remains were laid to rest at Mt. Hebron on Friday. Loton Ray for whom a warrant was issued charging him with shooting McWilliams is still at large.

To Establish Store.

The recently organized Farmers Union is contemplating the establishing of a large general store somewhere in the county for the benefit of its members. Their plan is to organize a stock company and build out in the country. They will hold a meeting at 10 o'clock a. m. Saturday October 21st to arrange the final details of the scheme.

Farmers Institute.

The Garrard County Farmers Institute will convene at the Court House on next Tuesday, the 17th inst, for a two days session. There will be discussions on various subjects which will be of interest to the farmers and stock raisers by men who are well posted on these subjects, and the farmers will find themselves amply repaid if they will attend.

Failed To Get His Man.

Sheriff Robinson was in Cincinnati several days last week endeavoring to secure some trace of the negro Allen Jones who shot and killed Harrison Preston at White Oak last week. Jones is known to have taken an excursion train out of Lancaster and was seen to leave the train at Cincinnati, but there all trace of him was lost and the sheriff was compelled to return empty handed.

Mr. Clifton Sanders Dies

Mr. Clifton Sanders died at his home in Cottonburg, Madison county, Sunday and his remains were interred at Gilead cemetery on Monday. Mr. Sanders was about seventy years of age and had long been a sufferer from a complication of diseases. He is survived by a wife and several grown children, among whom are Mrs. Sam Schooler and Mrs. Brutus Wearren of this county and Mr. Allie Sanders of Lancaster.

Former Lancaster Lady Dies In Texas

Mrs. Edna Burdett died last week at the home of her son, Mr. William Burdett, an attorney, in Paris Texas. Mrs. Burdett formerly resided in Lancaster and was Miss Edna Letcher, she married Joshua Burdett, who was a brother of the late Dr. Steve and Benjamin Burdett of this place, and who preceded her to the grave many years ago. Mrs. Burdett has a brother still residing in this state, Dr. James Letcher, of Henderson Ky.

Steve Changes Base.

Editor Tim Needham of the Winchester Democrat has sold his interest in that good paper to Mr. Steve K. Vaught, who has been the editor of the Richmond Climax. We regret very much to see Bro. Needham leave the journalistic field and hope he may take up the work elsewhere, but we congratulate the Democrat on the fact that they have secured in Steve Vaught a genuine "live wire", who will keep the Democrat up to the present high standard, which it attained through Mr. Needham's guidance.

Don't Forget The Fair Meeting.

The meeting for the stockholders in the new fair association is called for Saturday October 14th at 2 o'clock p. m. at the court house and a large attendance of all those interested in the scheme is desired and expected.

This is our last call in the matter. The meeting will be a decisive one. If there is enough stock subscribed to justify the promoters to go ahead and organize and incorporate, it will be done, otherwise it will be taken for granted that this kind of a fair association is not desired and the matter will be dropped in so far as the proposed manner of conducting next years fair is concerned.

Now if the people of the county wish to identify themselves with the people of the town in this movement, this is their last opportunity, they have been given ample notice time and again, and unless they betray some interest in the matter, it will have to be abandoned. There are three solicitors in every precinct in the county. Call on one of these and subscribe for one or more shares, if this is not convenient, come in Saturday afternoon, attend the meeting, buy stock and help push the matter along.

Glance at the label on your paper and slip us that dollar if you are in arrears.

Mr. R. H. Batson is remodeling his gents furnishing store and putting in clothing cabinets.

Successful Meeting In Progress

The meeting at the Baptist church continues to attract large crowds, and there has been several additions to the church. The meeting will continue through this week.

James Kennedy Dies.

James Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grove Kennedy of the Preachersville neighborhood died Monday of bladder trouble. His remains were interred in the cemetery at Preachersville Thursday.

They Liked Lancaster.

The teachers who assembled here last week from Boyle and Mercer counties were favorably impressed with Lancaster and our people and we heard many kindly expressions from them concerning the treatment they received while here. They were a representative body of people, the kind we like to have among us, and we hope to have them with us again before many years.

Republican Candidate For The Legislature.

In this issue of the Record will be found the announcement of Mr. John L. Dozier as a candidate for representative from Garrard county. Mr. Dozier is the regular nominee of the Republican party, having been nominated at their convention recently held in Lancaster. Mr. Dozier came to this county from Knox and purchased the farm of Mr. H. K. Herndon near Paint Lick, where he now resides. Mr. Dozier is about 45 years of age and is a good citizen and a clever gentleman. He is not wholly unacquainted with the political game, having served several terms as jailer of Knox county.

Nothing But First Class Films.

The management of the Lancaster Opera House have been solicited to put on the famous "Beulah Binford pictures", but upon his own initiative the manager Mr. W. J. Romans, refused. These pictures have been turned down by opera houses all over the country sometimes by the management of their own volition, and sometimes because the authorities would not permit their being shown. The patrons of the local play house may rest assured that neither these or any other films of a like character will ever be offered here, as the management will not permit an objectionable film to be placed on his machine.

All Convalescent.

Judge Walker is still improving, his condition is all that could be desired and his rapid and complete recovery is now assured.

Miss Flossie Sutton and Mr. E. A. White, both of whom have been at the hospital for a week with typhoid fever, are doing nicely and their progress is all that could be expected at the present stage of their illness.

Holman Brown son of Mr. George Brown was taken to the hospital on Monday suffering with typhoid fever.

The two young boys, sons of Mr. Watkins and Mr. Kelly are getting along nicely, are well on the road to recovery and are entirely out of danger.

Farra Honored.

Denny B. Goode, Secretary of the "Greater Kentucky Convention" which is to convene in Louisville on November 14-15th has appointed John M. Farra of this place to represent the Eighth Congressional District at the meeting. Mr. Goode certainly displayed splendid judgment in his selection, as there is probably not in the entire district a man who would lend more hearty and intelligent co-operation in the upbuilding of the state than Mr. Farra.

The proposed meeting is called at the instance of Mr. George H. Cox of Owensboro, president of the Federation of Kentucky Clubs, and J. W. Porter of Lexington, president of the State Development Association, and is for the purpose of calling together representative men from all over the state for a discussion of the best means of intelligently furthering the interests of the state.

Sparring For An Opening.

The "wets" and the "drys" are having a merry time of it in Stanford as to whether or not an election shall be called to take the sense of the people as to whether or not Lincoln county shall have open saloons. First the whisky people filed with the county Judge a petition bearing 1883 names, a sufficient per centage of the voters required by law, asking for an election. Now comes attorneys for the Temperance with another petition from 55 of the alleged signers of the original petition asking that their names be stricken from the list; the next move was made by the whisky people and was in the form of another petition containing the names of nineteen people who claimed to have signed the "dry" petition, but had now experienced a revulsion of feelings and desired the election. Further time was asked for and was granted until to-day (Friday) when the matter will again be taken up.

Republican Ticket.

We are authorized to announce John L. Dozier as a candidate for Legislature from Garrard county, he being the regular nominee of the republican party.

Hon. John M. Farra, democratic nominee for representative has purchased a fine saddle horse and is going through the county telling his many friends his plans when he reaches Frankfort and asking them for their support. He has been here more than one year and knows the needs of Garrard county. He has never grown tired of doing good for the county and all his life has spent his time and money to better the county. He is trying now to get the traction line extended from Nicholasville here and if he succeeds, it will mean that the land of this county will be worth 20 per cent more than it is now. We could name you a hundred things that he has done for the county and if he goes to the Legislature he will do another hundred things that will benefit the farmers and citizens of Garrard. Vote for him and you will never be ashamed to own that you did for he will do Garrard county so much good that not even the republicans can find any one to run against him next time, and goodness knows they had a hard enough time to get any one to run this time and finally had to get a man that has only recently moved into our midst from the county of Knox.

We are asked every day "what about the water works extension?" We are unable to answer this question, there not having as yet been anything definite done toward the extension. Winter is coming and the lake will in all probability fill up, and the urgent necessity for enlarging the plant will be relegated to the rear for the present. But is this good policy? Is it wise to put this matter off from time to time, until we are finally brought to the realization of our urgent need along this line by a water famine, or is it advisable to go through another summer with out city water unit for any usage except fire? What says the City Council? Are we to have any relief along this line?

James B. Haggin, after a long and careful examination of the papers submitted to him by the Tobacco people, and after receiving the advice of his manager Mr. C. H. Berryman and his attorney Mr. John T. Shelby, has affixed his signature to the contract, thereby assuring the formation of the ten-year pool, the erection of a mammoth factory in Lexington for the manufacture of the product of the pool, and the formation of a stock company with an approximate capital stock of $5,000,000 which will look after the financing of the project. By the terms of the contract Mr. Haggin becomes a director in the Burley Society.

Only about three more months until the convening of the Kentucky Legislature. Only about three more months in which to determine the ownership of the park. With the coming of the next session of the legislature steps will be taken for the session of the park to the Government for a site for Lancaster's custom house. Then will we be called upon to furnish a deed to the property. Can we do this? Or shall we lose our new post office by default? Any action that is to be taken must be taken quickly.

Secretary of State Ben L. Bruner has called upon all state banks to give him a statement of their standing as of September 28th. Insurance Commissioner Bell has taken Mr. Bruner severely to task for his action in closing the Bank of Kentucky in Louisville recently, averring, that his motives there for were personal and unjust. There are criminalizations and recriminations and a veritable war of words through the press. Some of Mr. Bell's utterance are exceedingly salty.

Rev. J. W. McGarvey, noted Christian minister, died at his home in Lexington on last Friday and his remains were interred in the Lexington cemetery Monday afternoon. Dr. McGarvey was 82 years of age and was born near Hopkinsville Ky. He was one of the oldest ministers of the Christian church was president of the College of the Bible of Transylvania University of Lexington, was a learned scholar and author, being the author of many noted religious works.

Another great dam gave way last week this time in Wisconsin, the Black River dam. As a result 1500 families are homeless, a property loss of $1,200,000 and famine staring the people in the face. In this instance the people were warned in time to avoid loss of life. The bursting of these great dams is a striking example that the works of man cannot withstand the Almighty.

Hon. Jerry Sullivan, one of the best democratic speakers in the state spoke at Stanford last Monday to a large and enthusiastic crowd of voters. Many of his friends are hoping that he will be sent to Lancaster to speak in the interest of the State ticket.

Lateness of the season and scarcity of help is forcing the picking of cotton by moonlight in Georgia. Pickers who once received 40 and 50 cents per hundred pounds for their work are now demanding $1.25 per hundred for picking, and getting it.

Former Lancaster Lady Sustains Loss

Mrs. Larry D. Jones of Monticello Ky., formerly Miss Willie Belle Burnside of this place, had the misfortune recently to lose her home in Monticello by fire. It caught from a coal oil stove entailing a loss of $2,000, with $1500. insurance. The contents of three rooms were saved from destruction.

Fiscal Court.

Fiscal court met Tuesday, Hon. A. D. Ford, Squire Jim Bourne, Logan Ison, J. W. Coldiron and Harrison Ray together with County attorney J. E. Robinson and Clerk J. W. Hamilton being present. The regular order of business was dispensed with and claims allowed. There was a change in the offices proposed which will come up at the next meeting. County Clerk J. W. Hamilton has a very small office and it almost a matter of impossibility to do any writing on a busy day when the country people are in town as there is always a crowd sitting around talking. It is alright for the people to be there and there ought to be a separate office for the recording clerk so that he could work without being asked questions. The proposed change is to let Clerk Hamilton have the county court room and cut a door into the vault, then let Judge Ford hold court in his present office and the sheriffs present office moving the sheriff into the office now occupied by Clerk Hamilton. The Fiscal court has not yet decided what it will do in the matter however this plan is under consideration.

A BLESSING.

The Hospital Is Proving Itself To The People Of Lancaster And Vicinity.

Bringing to our very doors advantages which heretofore could only be obtained in Lexington, Louisville or some city, the Lancaster Hospital is proving to be a great boon to those who are so unfortunate as to become seriously sick.

Here are to be found all the advantages which we have at the metropolitan hospitals, and without the necessity of a railroad journey, which is fatiguing to a well person, much less one who is sick, to say nothing of the dangers attendant upon the transportation of a person for some distance who is sick enough to enter a hospital.

Mrs. Will D. Walker as Matron of the local institution looks after the comfort and welfare of the patients in so far as her part of these duties are required, in a manner which we are satisfied cannot be excelled in any of the large institutions. The nurse in charge, Miss Florence Darnell of Maysville Ky., is one of the best trained nurses in the state, and gives to all who come within her care as efficient and intelligent attention as could be had anywhere.

As for medical attention, you may have your own physician, and a necessity demands, or it be deemed advisable, you may call in any physician from a distance that you may desire.

There has always existed a certain amount of prejudice in the minds of a great many people against hospitals in general, but the home institution is rapidly dispelling this delusion. At a hospital one may have the very best of skilled attention, a trained nurse is always in call, knows just exactly what to do in case of emergency, and if the occasion demands it a physician can be called in much less time than if the patient was at his or her home.

All of this may be had at a cost equal to if not less than the expense of a serious illness at ones own home.

Grand Lodge Meetings.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows is in session in Louisville this week and Franklin lodge No. 7 of this place is being represented by Mr. J. Booth Sutton. Next week the Masonic grand lodge meets in Louisville, Mr. W. O. Rigney will represent the Lancaster blue lodge, while Henly V. Bastin will go down as the representative of the local lodge of Royal Arch masons.

$17,500 For Judge Bell's Death.

In the Superior Court at Seattle Washington Monday Judge Ronald ordered a jury to award a verdict of $17,500 to the young son of the late Judge W. C. Bell for the death of his father, against the Seattle, Renton & Southern R. R. Co., upon which railroad Judge Bell lost his life in a collision about eighteen months ago. Mrs. Bell sustained injuries at the same time from which she afterward died, and a suit is now pending in the same court against the railroad company for her death.

Good As Asphalt.

The remodeling of Richmond street to the city limits has been completed, and that street is now a thing of beauty and equal in appearance and durability to any of the boulevards in the cities. The work cost the city over $1000, but it is well worth the money expended, and we wish they were able to place every street in the city in the same condition. The work was done with the county machinery under the supervision of "Squire" Jim Bourne and Chief Herron, both of whom displayed great adaptability in the art of road building.

Cap't Richards Dead.

The remains of Captain Thomas Richards were interred in the Lancaster cemetery on Monday afternoon. Cap't Richards died in Stanford. He was in his eightieth year. He is survived by his wife and one daughter. Cap't Richards was a former resident of Lancaster, where he is well known. He was living here at the time of the outbreaking of the Civil war and cast his lot with the Confederacy, where he served throughout the war; he was a bugler, with the Army of Tennessee, first with Gen. John S. Williams and later with Gen. Joe Wheeler. Cap't. Richards formerly conducted a hotel both at Stanford and Danville.

Game Law

Section 1944 of the Kentucky statutes states that no person shall kill or pursue with such intent, or have in his possession when so killed any rabbit, or squirrel between the fifteenth day of September and the fifteenth day of November of each year. It is also unlawful to kill any quail from now until the sixteenth day of November. There are six game wardens in the county and this year they are going to put forth every effort to stop the unlawful killing of our game.

If any one has the chance to report such cases as above mentioned, the wardens would be pleased to look into the matter, or you could notify the county Judge or county Attorney. The time has come when our game must be protected or else we will not have any at all in the course of a few years. Under the above section the hunters cannot go out under the pretense of hunting rabbits as it is just as unlawful to kill them as it is to kill the quail and the rabbit law was passed for the express purpose of protecting our quail. For the benefit of those who might violate the law we will state that there is a heavy penalty for each offense, and we would advise you to refrain from hunting until after the fifteenth of November. The penalty for each offense is not less than $25. nor more than $100, and each bird or rabbit killed will constitute a separate offense.

HOGAN L. YANCEY

Former Lancaster Boy Wins Democratic Nomination For City Attorney In Lexington.

Hogan L. Yancey former Lancaster boy, manager of the Lexington Base Ball Club of the Blue Grass League, champion athlete and a young college man, in the Democratic primary in Lexington Tuesday won the nomination for the office of City Attorney over four opponents by a plurality of 425 votes.

Hogan Yancey formerly resided here with his parents, and his and the many friends of his parents will rejoice at his good fortune. His father, Rev. James L. Yancey at one time had charge of the Christian church at this place.

The other candidates nominated were Mayor, J. Ernest Cassidy; State Senator, Thomas A. Combs; City Clerk, James O'Brien; City Engineer, J. White Guyn; City Treasurer, Frank G. Ott; City Assessor, John McElroy City Representative, David C. Hunter and Jailer John W. Masner.

Playing With Fire.

Out in the county someone is tampering with rural mail boxes, tearing them from their places and throwing them away. There is a heavy penalty attached to this kind of deviltry and "Uncle Sam" is not inclined to be lenient with people who interfere with the U. S. Mail receptacles. Some time when these miscreants are least expecting it an Inspector will swoop down on them and the dose that will be administered to them will break them forever from interfering with mail boxes.

Teachers Institute.

We gave as near as we could last week a write up of the Tri-county teachers institute however we did not then have the resolutions so give them to you at this time.

Your committee on Resolutions for the Tri-county Institute composed of Boyle, Garrard and Mercer counties reports as follows.

Resolved 1st: We heartily thank the citizens of Lancaster for the cordial hospitality shown in opening their homes to the visiting teachers of the Institute, and good will manifested on all hands by the citizens of Lancaster, in general.

Resolved 2nd: That we recommend that the Annual Institute of 1912 be composed of the same counties as of this year, and that the meeting thereof be held in Harrodsburg at a date to be fixed by the Superintendents of the counties aforesaid.

Resolved 3rd: That we hereby voice our hearty appreciation of and profound thanks for the untiring efforts, the practical and pointed talks and great zeal shown for the improvement of our work, by the instructors, Prof. J. C. T. Noe and Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart.

Resolved 4th: That we heartily favor the enactment of such new laws by our Legislature, particularly an efficient compulsory law, as will further the best interest of our schools, both pupils and teachers, and of a nature that will redound in the fullest measure to the upbuilding of grand old Kentucky, the best place this side of Heaven the good Lord ever made.

Resolved 5th: That we acknowledge our deep debt of gratitude to the respective County Superintendents of this Institute; Miss Higgins of Garrard Co. and Miss Adams of Mercer Co. for their unflinching effort to uplift the standard of education to a loftier position and likewise to Prof. J. W. Rawlings of Boyle county whose faithful work as Superintendent of Boyle Co. for nearly a quarter of a century is marked by substantial progress on every hand.

Resolved 6th: That the Tri-county Institute now in session is a grand success as manifested by the attendance, attention, and enthusiasm of the teachers, and we earnestly hope and desire that Harrodsburg will be selected as the place for the Institute to be held in 1912.

Resolved 7th: That we, of Garrard, Mercer, and Boyle extend to Miss Lula Bates of Danville our thanks for the pleasure afforded by her excellent music, and also to Mrs. Fallis of Danville, and Misses Welch and Cochran for their praiseworthy efforts in the same line.

Resolved 8th: That we, the teachers, pledge ourselves to attend, if possible, the congressional District meeting, which will convene in Lawrenceburg, on Friday after Thanksgiving.

We also promise to prepare correctly each monthly report, to deliver the same to the Co. Superintendent after each report has received the signature of both the Chairman and Sub District trustee.

Resolved 9th: To our fellow teachers of the Institute we offer the tribute of "good will" or a "God speed you" in the glorious work in which you are engaged.

RESOLUTIONS.

The meeting adjourned Friday and every teacher felt that they had been benefited by the interesting talks and had made many new acquaintances that shall last through the years to come.

Prof. J. W. Rawlings, Supt. of Boyle county was one of the last ones to leave the city Friday afternoon as he has many friends here that had to see him and have a few words. He is well known and often comes here during court, he is one of the ablest lawyers at the Danville bar and enjoys a large practice.

The crowd all seemed very much pleased with Lancaster and the courtesies that were extended them by the people. Many interesting talks were given and their parting work was "Goodbye, meet me in Harrodsburg next year."

Tobacco Curing Nicely.

The tobacco cutting season is about over and the farmer is now concerned about the curing of the weed. Last week's heavy rains caught considerable of it in the field, some of it cut and on sticks, but we have heard no complaints of it being damaged. The farmers are exercising especial care this year in the curing process and the chances are that it will be "colory" and free from house burn, and taken altogether the best crop produced in the county in many years.

CLAYTON'S CORDIAL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

When you take a spinster who has got to be forty years old, who has got a large mouth, whose nose tilts up at the end, who has a cast in one eye, who is tall and scrawny and has a limp, you must figure out that her chances of getting married are not more than one in a thousand.

Such a woman was Sarah Clayton of Harpersville. For thirty years she had been the champion homely girl and woman of Bennett county. She realized it, but she couldn't help it. Sarah's father and mother didn't like her looks at all. Some folks were mean enough to say that hastened their end. Sarah had two brothers. They ran away and went west to be killed by the Indians. Some folks say that if Sarah had been a reasonably good looking girl neither brother would have left home. At the age of twenty-eight she was an orphan and brotherless, and, while the property she inherited was enough to give her a comfortable living, it was not enough to bring a husband.

While Sarah realized all the drawbacks, she was not entirely discouraged. She had a belief that something would happen some day, and she didn't go around making herself and other folks miserable. Twelve years came and went and nothing happened, but she was still on the job.

At the state election, with the temperance question as an issue, Bennett county and four others surrounding it went dry—no more of the foamy, no more corn juice.

You can't figure out what this temperance question had to do with Sarah Clayton, who scarcely knew what was going on until Bennett county was as dry as a bone. Well, homely as she was, Sarah understood the man side of human nature very well. She knew there would be an intense longing for the unattainable.

After the temperance movement was in full swing and the pinch was on "Clayton's cordial" appeared. It passed as a soft drink. Some folks said it was cider, some root beer and some thought it came under the head of ginger ale. Whatever it was, it bore the label as above, and it jumped into popularity at once. It filled an aching void. It soothed and comforted. It quenched that longing in the neck. It did more. It saved hundreds of homes on the point of being wrecked. It had got so that not one husband out of twenty in the five counties could speak a decent word to his wife once in three days. And then there were less of ambition, indigestion, headaches, pains in the stomach and giddiness, and all these things the cordial was warranted to and did drive away in short order.

Sarah made the first fifty bottles with her own hands. Then she had to hire a boy, then she had to hire a man as well, then she had put it on sale at the drug store. Nothing ever made a name for itself as fast as "Clayton's cordial." It could not be made and bottled fast enough to supply orders. Of course the spinster had calls from men who wanted to buy her secret. A dozen in her own town stood ready to pay a good price for it. There were two sorts of men came—married and unmarried. The married men were turned down at once. The secret was not for sale. The unmarried ones were told that the cordial must stay in the family. That wasn't saying right out that no one but a husband would be given the recipe, but the unmarried callers caught on once after another. There was money in that recipe, but there was Sarah behind it—Sarah the homely. They thought of the bumpy cordial and then looked at the homely woman. No, not it was too much. Sarah understood and did not blame them. Neither was she cast down. She just went right ahead turning out the great and only discovery and supplying other markets, and the orders and dollars kept rolling in.

And one day he came. He was an old bachelor of forty-five. He had spent most of his years in the woods and far from women. He had never even thought of marriage. He wasn't a bad looking man, and he bore a good character. He happened to see Sarah Clayton in the postoffice, and in the jerk of a lamb's tail he was in love. In his eyes she was the most charming woman he had ever seen. She must be his or his life would be naught to him. Without having heard of her cordial from any one he followed her home, and told his love and gave her half an hour to make up her mind.

"But I am afraid you are actuated by mercenary motives," she said. "Why, I've got enough to keep us both and am making more all the time."

"But you see I have made a whole lot of money out of my cordial." "Cordial be hanged! If you have any money use it to buy clothes with."

"And you are not after the recipe?" "Never had a recipe in my life and don't want one. I want you."

After the marriage Sarah was willing to sell the recipe. When the best offer had been reached she wrote it down:

"Old cider, twenty parts. "Ginger, two parts. "Horseshadish, five parts. "Brandy, seventy-three parts. "What is all," she said. "And you've made $5,000 and a husband out of it?" "Why—why, I think I've done fairly well for a homely old maid!"

LAME EVERY MORNING.

A Bad Back Is Always Worse In The Morning Lancaster People Are Finding Relief.

A back that aches all day and causes discomfort at night is usually worse in the morning. Makes you feel as if you hadn't slept at all.

Can't cure a bad back until you cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve sick kidneys—make you feel better, work better, rest better and sleep better.

The following statement proves the merit of Doan's.

L. W. Cox, 302 Bowyer St., Lexington, Ky., says: "My occupation required much heavy lifting and I believe that this was the cause of my trouble. I first noticed a dull pain in my back which became so acute that I could not rest. When I arose in the morning, I was lame and stiff and felt so tired that I could hardly commence the day's duties. My kidney's were also disordered and the kidney secretions caused me annoyance by their frequency in passage. I doctored and tried any number of remedies but could find no relief. When suffering severely I had Doan's Kidney Pills brought to my attention and deciding to take them, I procured a supply. I soon improved and after I had taken the contents of a few boxes I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sold agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Bit of Fact.

Four man-eating lions were recently captured at Gwalior, in India, by means of fly-paper, which, getting on to the faces of the animals, made them an easy prey.

Averts Awful Tragedy.

Timely advice given Mrs. C. Willoughby, of Marengo, Wis., (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumption" cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote "and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved my little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble." This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by R. E. McRoberts & Son.

Is The World Growing Better.

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see, 50c at R. E. McRoberts & Son.

Early Culinary Skill.

Wild Arabs still boil a young lamb or kid in milk. Cookery has always held high place with highly civilized man. As the saying goes: "A man thinks as he eats." One of the earliest references to great culinary skill is where the flesh of a kid was prepared so perfectly that it tasted pretty much like fresh venison.

A SOLEMN MYSTERY.

Mark Twain Declared It Cast a Gloom Over His Whole Life.

Once upon a time Mark Twain was interviewed. After various questions the interviewer came to the question of relatives, and from then on, according to Twain's own version of things, the conversation ran thus: "Who is this obscure on the wall? Isn't that a brother of yours?"

"Oh, yes, yes! Now that you remind me of it that was a brother of mine. That's William—Bill, we called him. Poor old Bill!"

"Why, is he dead, then?"

"Ah, well, I suppose so. We never could tell. There was a great mystery about it."

"That was very, very sad. He disappeared, then?"

"Well, yes, from a general sort of way. We buried him."

"Buried him? Buried him without knowing whether he was dead or not?"

"Oh, no; not that! He was dead enough."

"Well, I confess that I can't understand this. If you buried him and you knew he was dead?"

"No, no! We only thought he was."

"Oh, I see. He came to life again."

"I bet he didn't."

"Well, I never heard anything like this. Somebody was dead; somebody was buried. Now, where was the mystery?"

"That's just it. That's it exactly! You see, we were twins, defunct and I, and we got mixed in the bathtub when we were only two weeks old, and one of us was drowned, but we didn't know which. Some think it was Bill, some think it was me."

"Well, that was remarkable. What do you think?"

"Goodness knows! I would give whole worlds to know. This solemn, this awful mystery has cast a gloom over my whole life. But I will tell you a secret now which I have never revealed to any creature before. One of us had a peculiar mark, a large mole, on the back of his left hand. That was me. That child was the one that was drowned. So you see they made an awful blunder. I was drowned, but they went and buried the wrong child. Sh-h-h-h! Don't say a thing about it where the family can hear it. It's a very sore spot."

It Got Monotonous.

A yellow negro in Kansas City decided that by bartering in the day time and fighting at night he could easily attain to great wealth. His first step in pugilism was against a shifty black with a good ring record. At the tap of the bell the black professional planted a straight left on the amateur's nose and repeated the process some hundred times. By a superhuman effort the yellow barber came to a clinch, and his voice rang high in agonized protest.

A COLORED WITNESS

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the days of slavery Colonel Augustus Picard, a Louisiana planter, had an altercation with a neighbor about the boundary line between the two plantations. The neighbor, Elias Green, a southerized Yankee, used offensive language to the colonel, who kicked him out of his house. Green sued him for assault, and one of the defendant's slaves, Mark Antony by name, having seen the fracas, was the principal witness. He was a sleepy looking old chap, and the lawyers feared that he did not have intelligence sufficient to give an account of what he had seen. The lawyer for the defense, not wishing to draw out all the darky had to tell, asked him but a few questions, then turned him over to the counsel for the plaintiff.

"Mark Antony," said the lawyer, "do you know what it is to state anything before this court that is not true or to keep back anything that you know?"

"Do I know dat?"

"Yes, do you understand what it means, and the punishment?"

"I reckon dat would mean in de fust place de judge if I said de moon war made of brass. And de second part would be de same's if I say Mistah Green draw a knife on my mums' and didn't say nothing at all about it."

A smile passed over the faces of the judge, the jury and the spectators. The lawyer showed embarrassment.

"Do you know the punishment attached to perjury?"

"Perjury? Is dat if Mistah Green blackyard Cunnel Picard behind his back?"

Another ripple of smiles passed through the courtroom.

"No, perjury is telling an untruth and not telling all you know after he has sworn. State what you saw on June 16 last at Colonel Picard's home."

"Mark," the defendant spoke up, "tell it all. I'm not ashamed of what I did. Don't keep anything back."

Thus reassured, Mark gave an account of the fray.

"Well, sah, on dat afternoon Mistah Green he come to de plantation."

"What plantation?"

"On' plantation, of co'se. Yo' don't suppose Cunnel Picard would go no' white trash? Mistah Green he come to de plantation, and I was waitin' at de do' with de hosses and carriage to drive de cunnel out fo' de mawnin' inspection. Mistah Green and de cunnel was in de cunnel's office right off de gallery and de winder war up. I hearn 'em talkin'."

"Mistah Green war sayin' to de cunnel dat de line between de plantations run right through de cunnel's gyard, and de cunnel say 'Yo' mistaken, sah; de bound'ry line war laid down by de su'vey, sah, and I am sho' it run through yo' gyard.' Den Mistah Green say, 'Yo' lie, Cunnel Picard.'"

"This is what you heard. Now tell the jury what you saw."

"What I sor? Why, when de po' white man told one of de fust' gentlemen ob de souf dat he lied, wah' yo' spec I sor?"

"Go on."

"I sor de po' white man comin' fru de do' like de ball comin' out o' de cannon."

"Did you see Colonel Picard eject him?"

"I don't know wah' dat means, but I didn't see it."

"Didn't see Picard push, shove or kick Green out of the door?"

"No, sah; I didn't see dat."

"Where was Colonel Picard when Mr. Green came through the door?"

"Don't know, sah."

"Didn't you see him or any part of him?"

"No, sah."

"What did you see besides Mr. Green?"

"Nottin' but a boot."

"Oh! An embarrassed smile."

"Well, suppose you tell the jury where that boot was with reference to Mr. Green."

"Mistah Green was settin' on it."

"Sittin' on it?"

"Yes, sah; he was settin' on it in de air."

"Do you mean to say you don't know to whom the boot belonged?"

"Don't know nottin' 'bout dat, sah."

"Tell the jury how it was that you could see the boot, yet could not see the owner."

"Well, sah, de steps leadin' down to de driveway are on de side ob de gallery. I was lookin' sideways. I couldn't see whose foot dat boot was on woidn't lookin' frow de side o' de house."

The counsel for the plaintiff gave up trying to identify the assaulter by means of Mark Antony and rested his case. The defendant's counsel merely stated that, while it had been proved that an assault on the person of Green had been committed, no proof had been adduced that his client had made the assault.

The judge instructed the jury that if they considered that it had been proved that Picard assailed Green they were to find for the plaintiff; if not, for the defendant. They found for the defendant.

"Yo' honah," said Colonel Picard, "will yo' be good enough, sah, to permit me to pay the costs in this case and a fine of $10? I reg'ard it a cheap price to pay fo' de privilege of havin' kicked the plaintiff out of my house."

"The case is closed," replied the judge.

Cause For Speed.

"Mr. Buizen is at the edge of a town with some gear trouble," says the assistant, turning from the telephone.

"He wants us to send out there and fix the machine for him."

"All right, but we needn't hurry. He has paid for the machine," says the agent.

"But he says he is willing to pay the time reading advertisements of other makes."

"Tell the repair crew to disregard the speed laws and get out there immediately,"—Judge.

Mr. Croaker

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"I wouldn't be John Croaker's wife for anything," said Mrs. Busby to Mrs. Emmous.

"Why not?"

"He's well named. He's a croaker, true enough. Besides, he's a grumbler, always snarling. The nicest man in this town is Ernest Schoefield. He always has a pleasant word for every one, is always smiling, and—"

"I have no use for him."

"Why not?"

"I prefer Croaker. Somehow I never feel sure of Schoefield's nice sayings. When Croaker growls at me I know what I'm getting."

"I reckon that's because you're kind o' queer yourself."

Mrs. Croaker had trouble at times with her husband. When she asked him for $5 to buy some needed article he would say, with a grumbling tone: "You can't get anything but the cheapest for $5, and there is no economy in cheap things. If you're going to get it at all, get the best." Then he would hand her double the amount she asked.

A little daughter, Alice, the only child of the Croakers, would occasionally get a pleasant word from her father, but she was the only one who ever succeeded in doing so. Andy Schoefield, a son of the Schoefields mentioned by Mrs. Busby, was a schoolmate of Alice's, and the children were growing up to be lovers. Andy's father didn't like the match and warned his boy against it. As for Croaker, he simply creaked as to the horrible future in store for the couple, since neither of them would have anything on which to begin life.

"Why, Ernest Schoefield is rich," protested Mrs. Croaker.

"How do you know?" snarled her husband.

"Why, everybody says he is, and he's just bought a $3,000 automobile."

"Oh, he has, has he? Has he paid for it?"

When Andy Schoefield became of age and Alice was nineteen it was evident that their hearts were set upon each other. It was about this time that Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Emmous met one morning at the grocery store.

"Isn't it awful about Mr. Schoefield?" said Mrs. Busby.

"What's awful?"

"Why, haven't you heard? He's failed and stuck all his intimate friends. And such a nice man too!"

"Well, Mrs. Busby, you know I don't fancy these people that are so nice to everybody. Their niceeness is usually only skin deep."

"They say he was living beyond his means."

"Just so. That kind o' persons usually do. It's their disposition to look on the best side o' everything, so they don't see the dark side. If they'd keep an eye on the dark side they'd come out better in the end. The bright side don't need watchin'."

"And just think how hard it is on the young lovers, Andy Schoefield and Alice Croaker. Everybody said what a nice thing her being engaged to Andy was. Mr. Schoefield gave out only a day or two before he skipped that he was goin' to give the couple a house."

"Reckon that was to keep up confidence."

"Well, I'm sorry for Alice. I should think she'd want to get married if only to get away from that crusty old father of hers."

"Oh, I don't think Mr. Croaker's so bad! I kind o' like to have him snarl at me once in awhile. I know he ain't foolin' me, and that's more than I know of these people who are always givin' me soft soldier. Good mornin', Mrs. Busby."

Mrs. Busby went away muttering, "The reason she likes old Croaker is she's one o' the same kind herself."

The Schoefield failure threw the Schoefields and the Croaker families both into a painful condition. First there was the disgrace attached to Andy's father running away to get rid of criminal proceedings against him; second, Andy hadn't a cent laid up; third, to mention marriage under the circumstances to Mr. Croaker was considered by Mrs. Croaker and Alice to be equivalent to shaking a red rag before a mad bull.

However, Andy had a position paying him $20 a week, and on this the two resolved to be married. Mrs. Croaker broke the news to her husband, expecting some violent expressions, and she got them.

"They're going to be married on $20 a week, are they? That's about enough to pay house rent."

"They can board at first, and if you can spare, say, $100 for clothes for Alice she won't need to spend anything in that way for a year or two."

"A hundred dollars! That's all rot."

"Well, fifty then."

Mr. Croaker went off to his den, where he kept his desk, and, coming back, handed his wife a check for $1,000.

"Why, pa, what does this mean?"

"Trousser," grunted the old man and went away grumbling about the folly of young people trying to bite off more than they could chew.

A third meeting occurred between Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Emmous.

"Mornin', Mrs. Emmous. Have you heard about that $10,000 house that crusty old Croaker gave his daughter when she was married?"

"No; did he? I always said I'd rather have that man hit me than another man talk so't to me."

MEETING TROUBLE.

Often times the hindrances that lie in the path of duty may be compared to the tollgates upon our turnpike roads—they are kept shut until we are just upon them and then fly open, as it were, of themselves. And that is true enough. If they had been open a week beforehand we could but have gone through at last.

Her Husband's Letters

By HELOISE BRAYTON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Edward Ballinger and his bride had just returned from their honeymoon and settled back into ordinary life. Though it was ordinary life, it was changed life. There was the difference between the single and the married state, which is a very great difference. Instead of remaining two individuals, they were to begin fusing into one double person. Those matters in which a married couple must be welded are innumerable. This story illustrates some of them.

On returning from his office at evening on the day after his return from his wedding trip the young husband found that the postman had left several letters for him, all of which had been opened by his wife. He repressed any expression of the slight shock he felt and, taking up the letters, read them. They were mostly from old chums, who, knowing of his arrival, welcomed him back, some waxing facetious on his altered condition. One was from Mortimer Smith, Mr. Ballinger's most intimate married friend.

"Ned," said Mrs. Ballinger, "I don't see why your chum, Mr. Smith, should attack me in that way."

"What way?"

"Why," he says, "your deaf ear will come in handy. When she gives you a certain lecture lu bed all you have to do is to bury your well ear on the pillow and you won't hear her."

Mr. Ballinger was puzzled. He understood the pleasantness of his friend's remark perfectly. Mrs. Ballinger understood only its unpleasantness. He knew that an explanation would be hopeless. He didn't attempt one. He concluded rather to use the incident to break up in the beginning his wife's opening his letters.

"The remark was not intended for you," he said, "and you should not have seen it. Old friends, especially men, understand each other and what they say should be held in confidence. If you had not opened his letter you would not have read what he said and would not have been irritated by it."

Mrs. Ballinger thought a bit before replying. "Don't you think that a wife has a right to know what her husband's friends think of her?"

Nothing is so irritating as to be obliged to argue with one who starts with an incorrect assumption. Though Mr. Ballinger controlled himself, he erred in being led into an attempted explanation. After ten or fifteen years of married life he would have taken his friend's advice and covered his well ear.

"You see, my dear, that Smith, who is a good deal of a joker, has had a long experience in married life and knows"—

"Is Mrs. Smith a wizen?"

"Not at all. Mrs. Smith is a very lovely woman."

"Oh! Then it is Mr. Smith who makes all the trouble in the family."

"There is no trouble in the family."

"Do you mean to tell me that there is no trouble in a family when the husband is obliged to cover up his well ear to escape what his wife has to say to him?"

"I'm! I don't see how a couple can be united when the husband has to cover up the only ear by which he can hear to escape what his wife has to say to him. I suppose he irritated her beyond endurance."

"You are attaching an importance to a witicism that does not belong to it, putting a matter of fact construction upon it. Mort was not referring to you especially, but to women generally."

"Oh, I suppose he's one of those men called women haters who think that everything bad comes from women. I have no patience with such men."

Mr. Ballinger's self control began to give way. "You haven't it in you to understand this matter," he said, "and it shouldn't have come up before you. It's your own fault. Had you respected my correspondence you would not have read that which you can't fathom. In future you will oblige me by leaving my mail untouched."

These were the first harsh words Mr. Ballinger had ever spoken to his newly made wife. He had scarcely uttered them when he saw a tear gathering in her eye. She said nothing more. Indeed, it was all she could do to pen up her feelings. Ballinger tore up the letters viciously and threw them into the wastebasket. His wife went out of the room, putting her handkerchief to her eyes at the same time.

The newly made husband had learned his first lesson in married life. He had learned that the logic laid down by Bishop Whately and more recent writers on the science would not do for home use. He followed his wife, but his arms around her and kissed away her tears.

"You have been very unkind," she said.

"Forgive me. I'll never do it again."

And the first matrimonial quarrel was over.

But the wife's opening of her husband's letters continued.

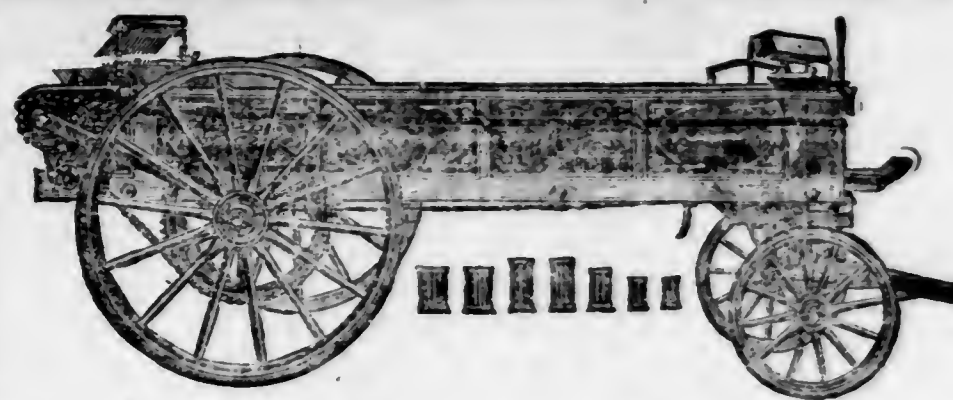

Here are two letters she never saw, one from her husband to his friend Smith and its reply:

"Mort, you are a fool to send such a letter to my house as the one just received. One would suppose a married man would have more sense."

"Ned, I admit the impeachment. I never do it again. Lunch with me to-morrow."

The Seven Sleepers.

The seven sleepers were seven noble youths of Ephesus, who in the time of the Decian persecutions; it is said, fled to a certain cavern for refuge. They were pursued, discovered and wallied in the cave, the perpetrators of the deed hoping to mete out a cruel and horrible death. However, according to the legend, they were made to fall asleep and were miraculously kept alive for nearly two centuries. Their names are given as Maximian, Malchus, Martinian, Denis, John, Serapion and Constantine.

Corn and alfalfa are the keystones of success, not only in the production of beef and pork, but in the production of butter fat. Wherever the two crops will grow there prosperity is sure to be found.

Some one who has tried it recommends putting a cupful or more of salt into the cistern to purify and sweeten the water. This causes impurities to separate and settle, when the clear water on top may be dipped or pumped off.

The fall thus far has been ideal for the securing of a supply of seed corn under the most favorable conditions. If there is any man, whose seed corn fails to germinate next spring it will be his own fault—because he is lazy or careless or both.

Anthraxnose, a plant disease that does much damage to both apple and pear trees, can be kept largely in check by spraying the trees as soon as the leaves have fallen with the bordeaux mixture. A thorough treatment at this time has been found to give excellent results.

Not a few boys and girls who go wrong in life and fall of anything worse than their parents' sins, are against the teacher at school. This is not a theory, but a condition that can be verified from the experience of teachers everywhere.

The good Lord apparently knew what he was about when he ordained that men and women should unite their efforts in the making of a home. Either sex makes a pretty bad mess of it when they attempt to go it alone. Of the two the man seems to be entitled to even more sympathy than the woman.

Some one fond of statistics in the large has found that the Russian uses on an average two pounds of soap per year and the Englishman twenty-one pounds, but since he uses cold water he is not any cleaner than the American, who uses seventeen pounds a year with warm water. The Frenchman uses fifteen pounds of cleanser and the German ten pounds.

The chief advantage of the cement floor for the poultry lies in the fact that it is rat and skunk proof. The tendency of the floor to gather dampness at certain seasons of the year can be overcome by a thin covering of earth or a generous scattering of litter. For the superstructure—walls of the henhouse no material exceeds clay hollow blocks, which insure both dryness and warmth.

A lady friend who is a reader of these notes reduced her jelly operations to a minimum during the hot weather by bringing her fruit juices to a boil and canning them. She will make her jelly as she wants it during the coming months, thereby saving herself a lot of discomfort from the heat and incidentally saving quite a bit of fuel. More than this, she claims that the jelly has a better flavor if made but a short time before being used, and we shouldn't wonder if she were right.

While next May is the time to make the rose bed, it is a good idea to be getting the material ready for it now. Among the best recommended is a mixture consisting of one part of broken blue grass sods and one part of well rotted barnyard manure. As much of this as will be needed should be composted this fall and allowed to decay until the time for making the bed in the spring, when the mixture should be added and thoroughly mixed one-half as much rather stiff clay soil. Botted leaves may be used in place of the manure and will give excellent results.

There is no economy whatever in scripping the ration of animals that work. are intended for the block or give milk. Neither is there profit in any man or woman who works keeping himself or herself in the same half fed condition.

There was something a bit awry in the arrangement of things when a longer interval was not provided between the exactions of the leeman and coal man. Instead of there being a gap those two fellows often overlap in their services.

A good many hens have that queer streak which makes them prefer to lay their eggs in the barn or wood house of a neighbor than of their owner. Perhaps it is the same tendency that makes so many youngsters prefer to play at the neighbor's than at home.

The fact is not generally known, but the tubers of the single blossomed dahlias are now being grown for consumption, as are sweet potatoes. Another curiosity along the same line is the use of milkweed as a vegetable, it being cut when tender and used as one does asparagus.

Even in the country the proper place for the pigs is in pens and yards provided especially for them and not the dooryard, lawn and flower beds. Many folks who are well fixed financially and have plenty of room on the farm seem to have some odd notions on this matter of where the pigs right ly belong.

The bacterial life which is responsible for scab in potatoes will live over in the ground from one year to another, but the spores which cause smut in wheat and oats do not; hence treating the seed means clean grain the following season, even on ground that produced a smutty crop the previous season.

The cause of scientific agriculture lost one of its most able and devoted advocates in the death of Professor F. H. King, who died at Madison, Wis., a short time ago. Besides writing a number of books on drainage, irrigation and soil physics, he devised the system of ventilation for barns which bears his name and has been so generally used by progressive farmers everywhere.

"Our hens are fat and in fine condition, but don't lay," is a summary of the complaint of hundreds of poultry keepers—in fine condition perhaps for the roasting pan or kettle, but not for producing eggs. It's their fatness and fine condition that are the cause of the trouble. Switch them from a diet consisting chiefly of corn to one of wheat, bran, skim milk, green stuff, meat scraps and the like, and the hens will sing a different tune and fill the egg basket.

No finer co-operation is exemplified anywhere than that which is being put into practice by many country pastors in connection with the varied practical problems which confront their parishioners and by these same hardworking parishioners in relation to the moral and spiritual problems which the domestic has on his hands. This co-operation carried out to the fullest extent possible has more in it of contentment and happiness for the American than any other agency that can be named.

Kerosene is sometimes used as a means of accelerating a lay fire, but in the case of an ill-smelling fire day there was so much acceleration that the unfortunate members of the family could not adjust themselves to it. The stove blew up, setting fire to the house, and five members of the family were burned to death before they could make their escape from the house. When kerosene is put on a smoldering fire a gas is at once generated that is as dangerous as gasoline. It is the ignition of this gas that raises havoc in such cases.

One living in central or eastern states and who has not been in the Golden State is sometimes at a loss to understand how orange ranches can have a value of from $1,500 to $3,000 per acre. But such prices are intelligible when one takes into account the value of single orange which can be got from such orange groves. One lady, a Mrs. Sears, who owns a fifteen acre ranch in the southern part of California, recently sold her crop of Valencia on the trees for $10,000 and had nothing to do in the transaction but endorse a draft for the amount. Of course this orange ranch did not come by chance, but was given painstaking care and spraying for a multitude of enemies to bring it to a profitable bearing condition.

One level headed farmer's wife we know who keeps many laying hens repeats the idea of having her also fresh eggs serve as a cork to float the prices of the great quantities of eggs of uncertain reputation that are marketed in violation of pure food laws. She has made a deal with a hotel in a large market center 350 miles from where she lives and every three or four days cruties her eggs and ships them to her customer by express. Each egg is stamped with the date on which it is laid. For eggs marketed under these conditions she receives 50 per cent more than if they were sold locally and marketed in a miscellaneous shipment. She has assumed that relation to the egg market which gives her a higher price in just the proportion that other folks market stale eggs, thus increasing the demand for those strictly fresh. She takes pains and is well paid for her trouble.

In an egg laying contest held in Australia last year the Black Leghorns made the best showing. In contests held thus far this season the White Leghorns seem to be in the lead. However, the rivalry is keen, and the honors may go to any of three breeds.

The fellow who carried a package along the street the other day about the size of two bars of soap had just bought a quarter's worth of sugar. If the trust keeps on boosting the price of the commodity inside of a couple of weeks a quarter's worth of sugar will look like one bar of soap.

The etiquette of the poultry yard ordains that newly hatched individuals of the hen species are chickens until they are six months old. From this time until a year old they are pullets or cockerels, depending upon their sex, while upon reaching a year old they are roosters and hens for all time.

The increase in the amount of corn which is being cut for fodder this fall is reflected in the sale of corn binders in different parts of the corn belt. In one instance which the writer noted recently a distributing firm in a town of 10,000, whose sales of corn binders average 200, has this season sold 1,200 of these machines.

The country revival might well have been, if it was not in fact, devoted for the spiritual regeneration of the fellows who have bought shoddy gasoline engines and who try to save a little money by operating rickety and played out machinery of one kind or another. An annual revival would be needed to keep such fellows even in fair shape morally.

What a tribute it is to the wisdom of a discerning Providence that the finest as well as the sweetest blessings that life holds are within reach of all the people, rich and poor and high and low—namely, sunshine and fresh air, pure water, the splendid beauties of the outdoor world and the love, contentment and happiness in the individual and family life.

The drought of the season closing should not only be credited with having forced many a farmer into buying a silo, but it has caused thousands of others to realize in a serious way, for the first time, the necessity of saving the farm upon the basis of self-sufficiency in the cornfield. If the season favored this season along this one line is remembered the drought will seem in a large degree to have been justified.

The practice of indiscriminate "piecing" between meals is to be frowned upon in the case of both children and adults, but the eating of a light lunch at stated intervals in the middle of the forenoon and afternoon has a good deal in its favor when practiced by those engaged in severe physical toil or by those who are in a depleted physical condition or invalids. It prevents an exhaustion that can only be harmful.

As the rural resident welcomes the mail carrier each morning it is hard for him to realize how great the industry is of which the latter is a part. However, there are 40,000 other men who are making just such trips every day. The aggregate distance that they travel daily is 1,000,000 miles, and in a year it reaches the enormous total of 300,000,000 miles. The service over these 40,000 routes costs the government $37,000,000 a year.

A majority of folks who plant potatoes select good looking seed from the bin in the spring. This method of selection insures type and size, perhaps, but it overlooks one of the most important factors in connection with potato raising—namely, yield. The only way to get around this is to go into the field from which one wishes to secure seed and dig enough hills with a fork to give the desired amount of seed. By this plan it is possible to select potatoes that are of good size and proper type and also those from which the yield has been best.

A sensible mother we know is being well paid for the care she is taking in the matter of the diet of her boy, not yet two years old. From the start she has aimed to feed him those foods that are nutritious and wholesome, particularly those strong in bone and muscle forming elements. The result is a degree of health in the child that is superb. The little fellow is free from stomach trouble, has pink cheeks, a clear skin and is remarkably strong and muscular. The mother has used in his diet milk, oatmeal, bread and butter, eggs, a limited amount of fruit, has reduced sweets to a minimum and gives the child no pastry. She adheres to this bill of fare at home and elsewhere and does not let neighbors or relatives stuff him with knickknacks or fill him with coffee that would give an adult nervous prostration.

Jones—George, I hear you were discharged from the marine band. What was the trouble?
George (the cornet player)—Well, I told you how it was. De band was playing sweet and low, and I saw a big note and played it loud, und, by gosh, it was a horsefly!
